By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

Plans are firming up for the sixth annual Railroad Festival in Ravenna on Saturday, September 20, and there will be plenty of fun for the kids, organizers say.

Most activities for children are free, and there are contests to be entered and prizes to be won. Mayor Estine Tipton said a new addition to this year's festival is hayrides in Veteran's Memorial Park (the Choo-Choo park).

There will be a children's parade at 10 a.m. on Main Street in Ravenna. Children can be pushed, pulled, or may pedal themselves, but no motorized vehicles will be allowed. Each participant receives a gold dollar.

Train rides will be offered again this year, and they will be free, thanks to the donations of some RCP sets goal to ...

...save the Mack!

On Monday morning, River City Players board members, County Judge-Executive Wallace Taylor and other courthouse employees gathered on the courthouse lawn to kick off a "capital campaign" for purchase of the old Mack theater on Main Street. RCP board member Penny West said $75,000 would buy the Mack, which will be used to develop tourism and the arts in Estill County. While the RCP has a long way to go to reach their goal, they have already raised money to pay for an architectural survey of the Mack, as well as some line drawings of renovations needed.

Halfway to Hazard plays Santa to high school music program

Above, country duo Halfway to Hazard performed at the high school last Friday. They brought a gift of instruments and a PA system, top right, donated through a partnership with Stars over Appalachia. Below right, students had opportunity to question musicians about their careers.

The excitement was palpable in the high school auditorium Friday morning as the entire student body and most of the faculty and staff gathered for a mini-concert by Halfway to Hazard.

The country music duo also came bearing gifts as representatives of the "Stars over Appalachia" program.

Robert Lawson, with the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame at Renfro Valley in Rockcastle County, introduced the band. He explained that a partnership with "Stars over Appalachia" brings artists, music, and "good things" into eastern Kentucky schools.

In this case, the "good things" were some shiny new instruments and a PA system. A tenor saxophone, french horn, euphonium, mellophone, sousaphone, xylophone, as well as mallets, a microphone and stands for all instruments were donated, to be exact.

Stars over Appalachia is a program co-sponsored by Eastern Kentucky University and the Kentucky Music Hall of Fame. The program puts entertainment celebrities in schools throughout the university's 22-county service region to work with teachers and administrators to promote the arts and inspire students to stay in school.

Lawson said over $1 million have been raised for Kentucky charities.

Another contributor to the program is Citizen's Bank and Trust of Jackson, and that was the connection that brought the group-- and gifts-- to Estill County.

Marty Snowden, an Estill native, is president of the Jackson bank and learned of the program through Lew Warrix, Chairman of the Board at the same bank.

Warrix also happens to be the father of Chad Warrix, one half of the duo Halfway

Ravenna Council lowers insurance premium tax

By LISA BICKNELL
CV&T News Editor

The Ravenna City Council had a lot to discuss when they met on Monday night at Ravenna City Hall. Besides considering fire, police and financial reports, the council voted to lower the insurance premium tax from the current 12.5 percent to ten percent.

All voted in favor of the tax rate rollback except Councilman James Richardson.

Mayor Estine Tipton brought the tax cut up again at the last meeting, although Councilman William Van Cleve has long been an advocate of cutting the rate back to ten percent.

Last year's projected budget has already been surpassed, giving the council confidence to generous individuals. Individuals wanting to sell items from a booth are asked to check www.estillcountyky.net, or call Ravenna City Hall at 723-3332 for an application. Applications for other contests can also be found on the website. There will be a “Beauty Pageant for a Cause” on Friday night, with the money raised to benefit railroaders. Emma Day is heading up the pageant. The Ravenna Greenhouse is again sponsoring a scarecrow decorating contest and a pumpkin decorating contest. The pumpkin decorating contest is at noon, and the judging for the scarecrow contest is at 10 a.m. This year’s festival includes a coloring contest, and the Estill Arts Council is helping with that. Prizes will be awarded for best railroad-themed artwork. Estill Springs and West Irvine schools are participating in the art contest. The Railroad Festival is also an opportunity for railroad employees, past and present, to get together. This year, Jerry Rose will be selling his detailed history of Ravenna, the railroad town, at the festival. T-shirts and concessions can be purchased on site, as well.

consider and pass the tax cut. City Clerk Susan Lay said that lowering the rate to 10 percent reduces revenues by about $2,079 for a year. However, property owners have been paying their taxes. Councilman Louis Officer said, “We’ve been lucky...we’ve only had 12 that didn’t pay property taxes.” He gave credit to Mayor Estine Tipton for being “on top of it,” and said, “that’s the first time that has happened in a long time.” The mayor said a few more of the remaining 12 had been in to pay. The tax cut will be submitted to the state in March 2015 and will take effect on July 1, 2015. The other big item on the agenda was a presentation by Bryan Kirby about the housing rehabilitation project that is about to get underway in Ravenna. Kirby said the $843,000 Community Development Block Grant must be utilized by proper procedures, and he was there to present the required ordinances and resolutions for approval. Among them was a procurement procedure which states that three quotes must be presented for services and materials if they are more than $20,000.

He said part of the idea is to keep the project “as local as we can.” A resolution for a “rehabilitation plan” was also discussed. He said the funding for the project through CDGB will be allotted through forgivable deferred loans. The five year mortgages will be funded at full cost, and one-fifth of them will be forgiven each year for five years. Homeowners will not be required to pay back any of the improvements. Kirby said everything will be built to Kentucky Building Code standards. He said if a home needs more than $50,000 in renovations, the home will be demolished and built back new. When bidding begins for the project, bids will go to the lowest qualified bidder. Contractors will be paid in phases, with the final ten percent paid after the final inspection has been passed.

Barr works as ‘Teller for a Day’

Congressman Andy Barr took on a new role Friday, August 22, serving as a “Teller for a Day” at the Citizens Guaranty Bank in Berea. “I enjoyed being a ‘Teller for a Day’ and getting a first-hand look at the kind of hard work being done by community bankers here in Berea and across Kentucky,” said Congressman Barr. “Our community banks are a critical resource for Kentuckians looking to responsibly gain access to the credit they need, including credit to purchase a home, pay for higher education, or even invest in their business.” Barr continued, “That is why I introduced a bill that would fix the flawed Dodd-Frank law and give the discretion and judgment back to local community bankers. Folks like those here at Citizens Guaranty Bank are in a much better position to judge their neighbors’ character and creditworthiness than unaccountable Washington bureaucrats.” Barr introduced H.R. 2673, the Portfolio Lending and Mortgage Access Act, which expands the Qualified Mortgage (QM) safe harbor to ensure that loans held in portfolio are automatically considered QM and comply with the ability-to-repay requirement in Dodd-Frank. H.R. 2673 passed out of the House Committee on Financial Services, of which Barr is a member, on May 22, 2014. “This is a commonsense bill, because it recognizes something that is inherent in banking: If a creditor is going to keep a mortgage loan on its balance sheet” thereby, retaining 100% of the risk of default “as a matter of basic logic, they are going to make sure that the borrower has an ability to repay what is owed,” said Barr. “Portfolio lending is the ultimate risk retention because as the lender, we assume the risk of default,” said Kathy Samples, Chief Executive Officer of Citizens Guaranty Bank. “We appreciate Congressman Barr’s work on this important issue and for fighting to protect our ability to responsibly supply credit to our community.”

to Hazard. Snowden wondered if his hometown high school was part of the service area. It was. That got the ball rolling, and Estill County Band Director Jason Bowles wrote a letter to the program. He was told to send a wish list, which the program met and even exceeded. Bowles called the donation “nearly unbelievable.” He estimated the retail value of the items to be between $8,000 and $10,000. “Things like this just don’t happen every day,” he said, noting that it was like Santa Claus had showed up early. “We are so fortunate.” Estill County High is one of four schools in the region to benefit from the program this year. On Friday morning, David Tolliver and Chad Warrix of Halfway to Hazard and their musician friends Tim Bowling and Josh White performed a short concert at the high school, then presented the gifts. Halfway to Hazard was the opening act for Tim McGraw and Faith Hill on their Soul2Soul Tour in 2007.

Since my announcement back in January to seek the Mayor's job, I have had several people ask me if I am from here... YES, and I am still proud of that fact. I graduated from ESTILL COUNTY HIGH IN 1963 with the academic schedule of studies and I was a member of the National Honor Society all four years.

I, therefore, feel the need to re-introduce myself. I was born on January 9, 1945 at Union Hall, Kentucky which is near Marble Yard and Betsy Ridge here in Estill County. My parents were Bevely "Cutter" Walters and Edna Tipton Walters. I was the eighth of eleven children and feel very fortunate and blessed to have them as parents. We later moved to the Pitts and Rogers Fork area where our Dad worked in the oil fields. Now, while on the subject of parents, I want to add how thankful I am for the upbringing they gave us, not just a moral and christian upbringing, but one of respect for all and the strongest work ethic that one could have, which is still with me today.

I would like to refer to two of those lessons:

1. I don't care if you agree to shovel ---- for a man for 50 cents per hour, you give him his eight hours of work.
2. You are digging a ditch for a man and he gets a chair and sits down under a shade tree to watch you, don't complain. Do the best job you can, learn everything you can about how its done, and one day you will be sitting in the chair watching.

Now, back to the campaign. I have been in a very unique position by having to garner information on why and how the City of Irvine is in the shape it is in by listening to the stories from many of you who have lived here while I was working and living in Ohio. Believe you me. I have heard many, many stories and even if only a small percentage of them are true, I cannot believe how some people in this area could have the nerve to even show their face in public. I have heard of possible factories locating here, stores that were willing to come to town, but all were turned down in order to protect the "GOOD OL' BOYS" network of which I am not a part. I feel it is time for us to get away from that and start working for the GOOD of ALL citizens instead of just a few "friends and/or family and political cronies". I plead with you to help me do that. TOGETHER WE WILL DO BETTER.

My opponent stated back in January, that he signed up because of concern about WHO was running, so I guess that meant me, James Eric Walters. Had he been concerned enough to come and talk to me, I could have assured him that NO, I have not been guilty of hauling hazardous waste from New York and dumping it in the front door of our school children at the high school and middle school. Neither have I been guilty of mishandling of the funds of the businesses I have been involved in, causing them to go bankrupt. With the Mayor being the chief financial officer of the city, I think this should be a very important concern to all of us.

If elected Mayor, I do not have a slate of people to fire on my first day in office, which would possibly bankrupt the city due to lawsuits of unfair labor practices.

I would hope that the cities of Ravenna and Irvine can unite together such as school systems did, and work to prove that TOGETHER WE CAN DO BETTER. Look at how much better our school system has become. To be able to pick up the local paper each week and find our students are competing at the state level in various studies, as well as sports, makes me proud that we finally did what should have been done years ago.

I ENCOURAGE YOU TO VOTE NOVEMBER 4, 2014 and cast your vote for the man you think will be the best leader for the City of Irvine. Please, do not vote for someone because of trivial things such as "he is a friend", "I went to school with him", "I have known him a long time". Let us break that mold.

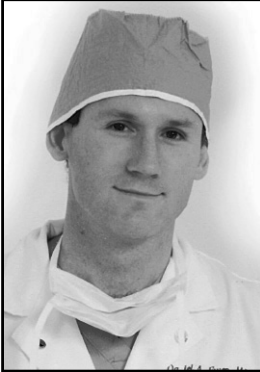

If elected Mayor, I will assure you that I, JIM WALTERS, will be your Mayor. Not someone else telling me what to say or do like a puppet on a string. I will be NO ONE'S puppet. I will listen and/or work with anyone who is interested in the betterment of this city. It is okay to LEAD, FOLLOW, OR STAND ON THE SIDE, but NOT OKAY TO IMPEDE.

If it is good for all of us, I am for it. If it is only good for a few, I don't feel it should be done, as it would not be beneficial to the city.

I covet your vote and support, and if given that, I do not think you will be disappointed, because I feel VERY STRONGLY that I am the best man for the job. I will work very hard to prove that to you as the Mayor, and see that we are "ALL" represented and the city grows and prospers. TOGETHER WE WILL DO BETTER.

Thank you and GOD BLESS our city.

The Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act

By Senator Mitch McConnell

As Kentucky’s senior senator, I am grateful to represent a state where so many people value and cherish the dignity of life in all its stages. As I travel across the Bluegrass State, I hear from Kentuckians about the many ways that President Obama and his liberal allies pursue policies that are contrary to the best interests of Kentucky. One area where there is a clear disconnect between the president and his supporters on the one hand and Kentuckians on the other involves the sanctity of life. Abortion is of course an issue that elicits real passion on both sides. But to me, and I believe to most Kentuckians, if an unborn child has reached the stage of development where he or she can feel pain, that life should be protected. We should all be able to agree that we should at least protect unborn children at the point at which they can feel pain. For that reason, I’m a proud co-sponsor of the Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act. This bill would allow America to join the ranks of most other civilized nations in the world by protecting unborn children after 20 weeks, or five months, in the womb, the medical threshold whereby a child can feel pain. This bill has already passed the House of Representatives. Thanks to remarkable advances in medical imaging and pre-natal surgery, among other things, an increasing number of Americans across the country have been waking up to the humanity of the unborn. It has been a joy to watch respect for the sanctity of life grow and spread across our nation; something truly good and positive is happening. Unfortunately, President Obama and his liberal allies oppose enacting even modest protections for innocent life. Well, I couldn’t think they are more wrong. As the father of three daughters, I believe innocent life should be protected. And I am proud of my career-long, 100 percent pro-life voting record in the United States Senate. In addition to co-sponsoring the Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act, I oppose forcing taxpayers to fund abortions. When the practice of partial-birth abortion was debated in 2003 by the Senate, I voted to ban the practice. I have co-sponsored bills in this current 113th Congress to prevent the circumvention of laws requiring the involvement of parents in abortion decisions by prohibiting taking minors across state lines for the purposes of obtaining an abortion. It is a privilege to represent Kentucky in the Senate, and in my leadership role I will continue to defend innocent life. I certainly appreciate the convictions of so many of my fellow Kentuckians who feel the same. Every life has worth. Our laws should reflect that.

This mascot skews reality about the first people

By Jennifer Varenchik

Until recently, I never really paid much attention to the Native American mascot issue. “It’s not my fight,” I thought. I live in Los Angeles County, home of the largest urban Native American and Alaska Native population in the United States. When I first moved to L.A. in the 1990s, I was constantly being asked if I was Latina. Sometimes people would get upset because I wasn’t able to speak Spanish. Occasionally, I would resort to sticking two fingers behind my head to act as a feather to illustrate being American Indian. Unfortunately, that’s all I had to reach for to explain my heritage. Thinking back on those times is what has helped push me to get involved with the campaign to change the Washington football team name. I grew up in a small, picture-perfect Northern California town. I was adopted by Caucasian parents and raised in a loving family, but the one thing I didn’t have was exposure to my Native American culture. I remember glimpsing major sporting events on television and seeing fans dressed up in the stands. As a child, I wondered if that was how my people dressed. How was I to know? I didn’t have any Native American references around me. Sure, I learned tidbits about Native American history in school, but nothing about modern Native American life. My exposure to my culture as a child was fans on television pretending to be Indians and tragic history lessons in school.

And you know what? That is all most of America has been exposed to as well. Just add casinos, and that’s what most non-Native people know about our culture. In L.A., I began working for a Native American nonprofit organization that helps Native youth. I wanted them to be exposed to the real Native role models. We put posters of great past and modern-day Native leaders on walls. We purchased books and DVDs that positively portrayed Native people, so the youth could see that Native Americans are more than history lessons and mascots. A few years later, I had the privilege of being able to travel to Indian reservations around the country with another Native nonprofit group. I learned about different tribal traditions, met many wonderful people and grew a deeper appreciation for my culture. I was able to participate in various ceremonies and to hear speeches by some of the same people we had posters of at my first job. I was able to connect with many elders, tribal leaders and community organizers about what life was like on their reservation. This brings me back to why I am involved with the mascot issue today. Now, I know better. Most of America doesn’t. In 2005, the American Psychological Association called for an end to Native American mascots, citing research that the presence of these mascots results in lower self-esteem among Native youth and increased negative attitudes by non-Native youth. A lot of the low self-esteem and high levels of suicide among Native youth go back to not being able to see positive portrayals of role models in the media. Many Native people know that most of America doesn’t really know much about us because we’re not seen, especially on mainstream media. With our culture being so wide and diverse, we want you to know more than the limited knowledge that comes from rooting for a team with a Native mascot. Each area of this country has a different climate, and the first people here learned to adapt and live off the land. The Native people of the Northwest lived a very different lifestyle than the people of the Southwest. But with mascot imagery, everyone thinks all Natives are from the plains area. With more than 550 tribes in this country, these limiting images automatically leave out a large amount of Native Americans. Shouldn’t we get to choose how we are known? Me, I don’t want to be known for feathers, tomahawks and war paint. I want to be able to say I’m Native American and the likely response is, “Oh, the first people.” Until I can tell people I am Native American and receive instant recognition, I will continue to do what I can to decrease negative stereotypes. Please join me in this struggle. Let’s create a new understanding of what it means to be Native American. *Varenchik (Tohono O’odham) is a speaker, writer and director. On roasting marshmallows, the deficit and your family

By: Rob Schwarzwald

Uncle Sam claims to knows best - even how best to cook. At least, that what it claims based on a report this week from House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy (<http://blogs.rollcall.com/218/mccarthy-lays-out-september-agenda-cr-disapproval-resolution-jobs-bills-but-no-ex-im-bank-war-authorization/?dcz>): “Last Friday the Forest Service published an article about how to roast marshmallows. Tips included using a roasting stick of at least 30 inches in length and substituting fruit for the chocolate and slices of angel food cake for graham crackers. This perfectly captures what is wrong with our government. Hard-earned tax dollars supporting bureaucrats who can’t pass up an opportunity to tell us how to live our lives. For the things that government is supposed to do - like confront terrorist groups - we don’t have a strategy, but for things Americans are supposed to be able to do for themselves - like figuring out the best ingredients for s’mores - government bureaucrats have that figured out.” Consider that nugget in the context of the following report, issued earlier this week by the Congressional Budget Office (<http://www.cbo.gov/publication/45684>): “Federal debt held by the public will reach about $12.8 trillion by the end of this fiscal year, an amount that equals 74 percent of the nation’s total output (gross domestic product, or GDP) this year. If current laws generally remained unchanged-the assumption that underlies CBO’s baseline projections-CBO projects that such debt would climb to $20.6 trillion, or 77 percent of GDP, in 2024. Interest payments on that debt represent a large and rapidly growing expense of the federal government. CBO’s baseline shows net interest payments more than tripling under current law, climbing from $231 billion in 2014, or 1.3 percent of GDP, to $799 billion in 2024, or 3.0 percent of GDP ...” How is this affecting families? It means less money for them to spend on and invest in their own needs and fewer resources with which to make their own decisions. It means fewer companies creating fewer jobs. It means things that our federal government was constituted to do, like defend Americans and their families, are given short-shrift in the federal budget (<http://news.investors.com/ibd-editorials/080114-711579-cutting-defense-only-tempts-bad-guys-to-threaten-the-world.htm>). What’s the solution? In addition to substantially down-sizing the federal government, restraining and reprioritizing its spending, and developing a less complex and confiscatory tax code, America needs stronger families. As my colleagues Pat Fagan, Henry Potrykus and I have written: “Government revenues come from the taxation of the economy. The slowdown of economic growth coupled with increasing dependency on entitlement and welfare programs makes closing the budget deficit impossible within the present welfare state model. The origin of these adverse pressures is the decline of the American family ... The origin of the slowdown in growth is demographic and was set by the decline in families seen during the sexual revolution: the baby boom is being replaced by a generation inadequate in size and in skills, capacities and know-how to continue robust economic growth. The solution to our economic difficulties is to grow intact married families rather than grow government” (<http://marri.us/our-fiscal-crisis-we-cannot-tax-spend-and-borrow-enough-to-substitute-for-marriage>). We don’t need the U.S. Forest Service teaching us about roasting marshmallows. We need a strong economy - and that means less Washington and stronger, intact, healthy families.

They work for you.

Columnist recalls ‘good old days’ of lots of hard work

By Jerry Eltzroth
CV&T Guest Columnist

When driving around our county and state this time of year, there is one thing you seldom see any longer—a field of ripening tobacco. I happened to see a tobacco patch when Bonnie and I recently traveled Old 25 when returning from Lexington. Bonnie had to have plastic surgery to correct the botched operation on her neck artery last May. Hopefully this will stop the pain.

Many of us can still remember the ‘good old days’ when you could traverse our country roads and see a field of tobacco in nearly every mile of your journey. No matter how you feel about the effects of smoking, tobacco was important to rural Kentuckians’ income for 200 years. It was also a way of life that has virtually disappeared.

The tobacco crop money at the end of the season meant the yearly bill could be paid at the local store, bank loans could be paid, new clothes/shoes for the family, down payment for a newer vehicle or farm equipment, seed money for next year’s crop and maybe enough left over to provide a good Christmas for the family.

My wife’s father, Coleman Kearns, raised tobacco nearly his whole life in Madison County; thus, Bonnie and her siblings were expected to help with the tobacco crop starting at an early age. Getting the crop to market each year was a family affair. Bonnie has told me stories about how she and her sister would have to get up early to go with their father to pull plants. One year when Bonnie was about 13 and her sister was 11 they went with their father to Fayette County to pull plants from a bed Coleman had purchased. Plant beds were scarce that year. Coleman had brought along some leftover fried potato drop biscuits for their breakfast. Bonnie and her sister fumed because they were only going to have those supper leftovers to eat. By the time they finished pulling the plants they were ready for breakfast. Bonnie to this day says those fried potato biscuits were delicious! Her father did stop at a store on the way home to let them get a pop and candy bar. That was a special treat in those days. Coleman would give Bonnie and other children a penny for each tobacco worm they brought to him which gave them a little spending money.

Todd Doty, with his back to the camera, hands off a stick of tobacco to Bonnie Eltzroth and the ‘water boy’ loading tobacco to be housed in 1998. If you add 4 feet to his height and add 16 years to his age the water boy will look like today’s Devan Doty, our great nephew.

Coleman started raising tobacco when you had to burn your beds off each spring before sowing the seed. Coleman worked hard as a farmer most of his life. They said he could cut tobacco with the best. When he started cutting a row, he never stood up until he reached the end. In his later years he delivered fertilizer for Tri-County Fertilizer in Richmond. His final years of working were spent as a janitor at Kit Carson and Clark-Moore Schools in Madison County. It was rather amazing that he was able to do this hard work since he was physically handicapped. Coleman suffered from polio when he was very young. The disease crossed his body and affected his right arm and left leg. They were much smaller than their respective mates. He had to wear a built-up heel in his left boot to compensate for his short leg. The polio also damaged his vocal cords; thus, he had a speech impediment. He always said he went to school one day, contracted the polio, and never went back. When I first met Coleman I had trouble understanding him, but I soon learned his dialect. Because Bonnie and her family had experienced Coleman’s lingo they could understand anybody with a similar speech impediment. Bonnie’s daughter, Devona, worked as a teller in a Richmond bank for a time. One of the bank’s customers had a speech impediment. He would always come to Devona’s station because she could understand him perfectly.

Although Coleman had little formal education, he was very intelligent and had acquired a Master’s degree in common sense. I learned a great deal from Coleman over the years. The first thing I learned was that you do not leave your coffee unattended with him around, or it will turn to brine. He explained to me the best way to drive in foggy conditions--you raise 1 finger on each side of the steering wheel and stay between the fingers. Another bit of wisdom he shared with me is this, “Whenever you are dealing with a banker, businessman or just playing spades with the family, whoever has the pencil usually wins.”

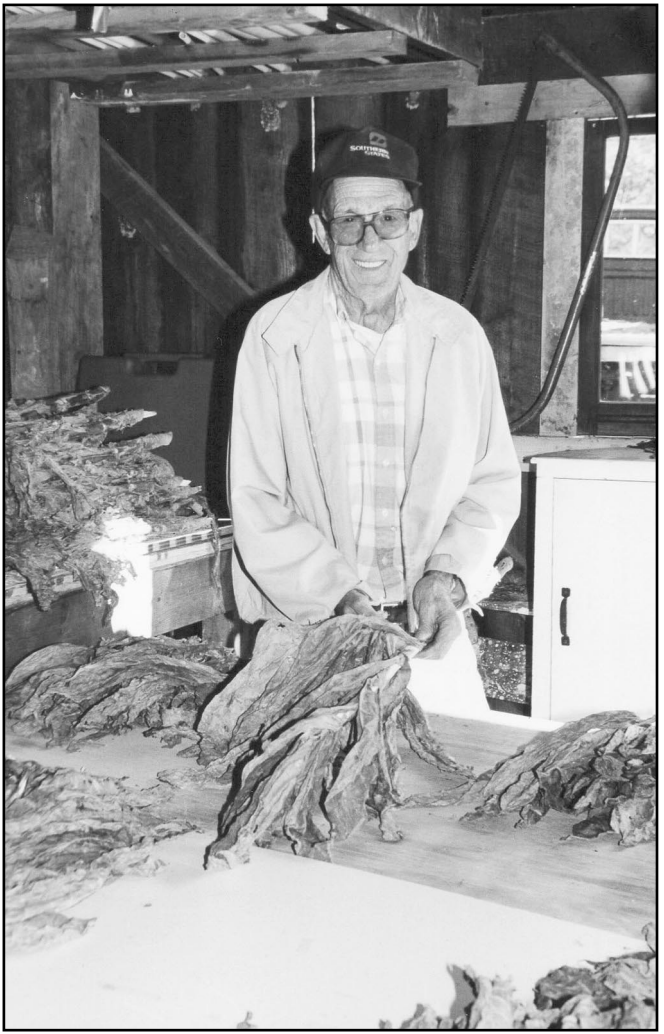

Although he would have been eligible for disability in today’s society, there was no such help in the ‘good old days.’ Later in his life Coleman was told by a doctor that he could get disability. He simply told the doctor that he preferred to work. He never even considered requesting a disability sticker for his vehicle. He had a lot of pride.

Near the end of Coleman’s life he had to see Dr. Allen, a urologist, about a medical problem. Dr. Allen said to him, “Coleman I see from my records that I have not seen you in 12 years. Have you seen any other doctors during those 12 years?” Coleman responded, “No.” Dr. Allen then said, “You seem to be doing very well not to have been to any doctors.” Coleman added, “Maybe because I have not seen any doctors is why I’m doing so well, Dr. Allen.” Dr. Allen laughed and said, “You may be right!”

At the time Bonnie and I were married, Coleman had ceased farming, but I had acquired 2 brother-in-laws that were still putting out a tobacco crop each year. When it was time for setting, cutting, housing or stripping, every able-bodied family member was drafted. I never lived on ‘tobacco road’ when growing up. There were no tobacco fields around Dayton, Ohio. Thus I did not even know the difference between a tobacco knife and a spear. I was soon given a crash course in Tobacco 101 which gave me the ‘bug.’ Before long I had the notion that Bonnie and I could raise our own crop. Bonnie’s first response to my idea was, “You do not know how much hard work you are getting into!” With my strong back and weak mind I thought I could handle the experience. In addition I had Bonnie and Coleman’s expertise to guide me. Over the ensuing years my back has become weaker, as has my mind.

When I purchased the Smithers’ farm the tobacco base had been lost because Gus had not been able to raise his crop and would not lease the tobacco base. I begged the Farm Service and they granted me a small base. After leasing it a couple years I rolled it over, so we would have about a thousand pounds to grow. That was enough to make our small tobacco barn bulge at the seams. As Bonnie predicted it was a lot of hard work, even with such a small base. We did this for 2 years and then started leasing our base again. I thoroughly enjoyed the experience. We had many family members helping us, which made the work more enjoyable. Bonnie’s father and mother put in many hours helping us strip the tobacco.

Probably the most memorable event for Bonnie was the day she was teaching me how to top the plants. After some initial instruction she said she would top the first row and come back on the second row. I was to do the same with the next 2 rows. She had previously warned me that snakes liked to lie under the tobacco leaves and you had to watch for them. As she started back on her second row she noticed I had barely started my first row. She thought,

Coleman Kearns, a good man of many talents

“If he is that slow I will be doing most of this topping by myself!” Shortly after she started her next row she let out a scream of terror. Some joker had wrapped a rubber snake around a tobacco stalk in her row. She just about quit on me that day.

After we ceased raising our own tobacco we still got drafted each spring to ride the setter for Bonnie’s brother, Donnie Kearns. It was getting difficult to find people to do this hard work. Bonnie and I always sat together on the left side of Donnie’s 2-row setter. We spent some long days helping her brother. Bonnie was such a pro at setting tobacco that she could fill her cups and any of my fumble-fingered misses. Donnie paid us a little more than the going rate. Bonnie always saved her tobacco setting money to provide the Ohio grandkids with clothes for the new school year.

After the government bought all the bases about 10 years ago, tobacco fields and that way of life has nearly disappeared. I wonder how many people still have their tobacco knife and spear. Mine is still hanging on a nail in the barn. One day the grandchildren or great-grandchildren will wonder for what they were used. The tobacco sticks are being used as tomato stakes or formed into primitive art pieces for sale at flea markets. You can buy large bundles of tobacco sticks at auctions for very little or sometimes people give them away. Before too many years there will be only a few left to remind us of the ‘good old days.’

I once worked in the early 1960’s as a Linotype operator (another antiquated occupation) beside John Fitzwater who was nearing retirement. He was from Cynthiana, Kentucky. Whenever something was mentioned about the ‘good old days,’ John would make this comment, “I lived through the ‘good old days’ of the Great Depression. We were cold and we were hungry. You can have the ‘good old days.’ I like my life the way it is now.”

If our ship-of-state’s ballast continues to shift to the left our nation may capsize and we may once again be living in the “good old days.”

Alexander completes U.S Navy basic training

Navy Seaman William C. Alexander, son of William D. Alexander and Renee B. Salyers and also brother of Chelsea R. Alexander of Irvine, Ky., recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill. with honors.

During the eight-week program, Alexander completed a variety of training which included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is “Battle Stations”. This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. “Battle Stations” is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of Honor, Courage and Commitment. Its distinctly “Navy” flavor was designed to take into account what it means to be a Sailor.

'Miss Ginny' retiring from library

Ginny Owens, children's librarian at the Estill County Public Library, says she has no specific plans for retirement after working full time for 46 years.

The last ten of those, she has worked at the library.

"Miss Ginny" says she hopes to catch up on chores like gardening and cleaning around the house.

She also hopes to devote more time to her favorite hobbies-cooking, sewing and embroidery.

Owens, library staff and patrons were provided an opportunity to wish "Miss Ginny" well in her retirement last Thursday with a reception at the library.

The staff presented Owens with an American Girl doll, something she says she's always wanted.

"I still have almost every doll I ever owned," she said.

Fresh out of Berea College, Owens began her career as a school teacher in the Rockcastle County school system where she taught fifth and sixth grades for two years.

After that, she taught sixth grade at Woodford County for two years, then she was an elementary school librarian in the Clark County School System for 32 years.

She didn't stay idle for long after leaving that position. In 2004 she joined the staff at the Estill County Library where she has been in charge of children's library programming for 10 years. Many know her from "story hour."

Owens' met her husband Phillip at Berea, where he was a student also.

Phillip Owens practiced law in Estill and Powell Counties. He passed away in 2009.

The couple had two sons, Thomas and Daniel. Owens said one lives in Eugenia, Oregon and the other lives next door. She also has two grandchildren and a great-grandchild who live nearby.

Kentucky Afield Outdoors: Archery deer, wild turkey seasons on deck

The days are growing shorter and cooler temperatures are starting to show up in extended forecasts.

The transition to fall is underway.

For Kentucky hunters, it started weeks ago with the opening of early fall squirrel season. Labor Day ushered in the start of dove season, and the onrush of hunting opportunities continues this weekend.

Archery deer and wild turkey seasons open statewide on Sat., Sept. 6 and run through Jan. 19, 2015.

The past two deer seasons produced new overall harvest records in Kentucky, and bowhunters helped set the pace for both. September saw record deer harvests the past three seasons.

"Given good weather conditions we're on track for a similar season," said Karen Waldrop, deputy commissioner with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The deer herd remains in fine shape after a 2013-14 season that saw hunters harvest a record 144,409 animals, and conditions have been favorable for fawn survival.

"I still think if hunters want to get a deer they can get one," said David Yancy, deer biologist with Kentucky Fish and Wildlife.

Turkeys provide another fall hunting opportunity.

A good year of poult production could mean more young turkeys available to hunters, and should lead to improved hunting next spring.

"Hopefully that increase in production will in turn help boost our fall harvest this year," said Steven Dobey, wild turkey biologist with Kentucky Fish and Wildlife.

Two variables – the weather and the mast crop - could have big impacts.

Biologists wrapped up their annual mast survey this week and preliminary reports indicate red and white oaks will be better than last year. Hickory nut production appears spotty while American beech nut production generally seems to be poor around the state.

"It looks like we're going to have an excellent crop of red oak acorns this year," said Ben

Robinson, small game biologist with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "White oaks look to be good as well, but not to the level of red oaks."

Red and white oak acorns are valued as food sources by deer, turkey and other forest animals.

If this turns out to be a good year for white oaks, key on those because deer prefer them over the bitterer red oak acorns, Yancy said. One way to distinguish a red oak from a white oak is by looking at its leaves. Red oak leaves have pointed lobes while white oaks have rounded lobes.

"You need to be doing the legwork to figure out what the deer are using," Yancy said. "Where are the acorn-bearing oaks?"

Wild turkeys aren't as finicky about hard mast, Dobey said, but they will concentrate around acorn-bearing oaks.

"To improve your success in the fall go out and do some preseason or in-season scouting to identify where the natural foods are," he said. "If the turkeys are there, position yourself in the landscape to try to intersect those birds as they're moving from roosting to feeding areas." Last season's fall turkey harvest was down 39 percent, a drop attributed to extensive rainfall during major hunting timeframes. The two shotgun seasons have accounted for 77 percent of the entire fall turkey harvest over the past decade, Dobey said.

"In years where we have really abundant mast production, our deer and turkey harvests typically decline," he said.

"That's because they don't have to wander. When they wander, they encounter hunters. If there's really good acorn production, head to the woods and find the food there. In doing so, hunters can increase their success in years of above average acorn production."

Fall soil testing

Farmers, gardeners, and homeowners should consider soil testing to determine what nutrients are in their soils and what nutrients are lacking that must be added for proper growth of crops, pasture, vegetables, ornamentals, or lawns. Soil testing is a special chemical analysis that provides a guideline for lime and fertilizer needs of soils. Soil testing service is available to every Kentucky citizen through the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station and the Cooperative Extension Service. We have soil sample bags and soil probes we can loan.

At this time, Estill County farmers can soil test through our office for FREE thanks to funding by the Estill County Extension District Board. Offer has limitations so call or stop by for details. You can contact the Estill County Extension Service at 723-4557. Educational programs of the Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service serve all people regardless of race, color, age, sex, religion, disability, or national origin.

Lonestar ticks

The lone star tick is our most troublesome species based upon its frequency of attack on humans and animals; this is the time of year when they are at their peak. Anyone accidentally moving thru clusters of tiny, hungry seed ticks (sometimes called turkey mites) can face a miserable few days. Female ticks lay hundreds to thousands of eggs in clusters on the ground. The masses of 6-legged larval (or seed) ticks that emerge from these eggs climb vegetation and wait with front legs extended to latch onto a passing human or animal. They will wander on the skin for a time (in some cases up to 24 hours) before attaching to feed. Barbed mouthparts are inserted into the skin and a cement is secreted to hold ticks in place while they engorge, a process that can take from 2 hours to 7 days; then they drop from the host. Ticks inject an anesthetic material that makes the actual bite painless. However, the bite site may be red and painful for 1 to 2 weeks after the tick has fed.

Frequent, careful inspections are essential for those who are in situations that expose themselves to ticks. Here are some tips: 1) Look for movement of very small, freckle-like spots on clothing and skin – they may be seed ticks. The larger nymphs and adults are much easier to see. Wearing light clothing, especially pants, will make them easier to spot. 2) Avoid overgrown areas along trail edges or woods – ticks are more likely to occur there. Insecticide sprays can be applied to shady areas or borders along woods, especially where small animals could live. In general, there is no need to spray open sunny, mowed areas of turf. Several lawn and garden insecticides are labeled for tick control in lawns such as Ortho Bug B Gon Lawn & Garden Insect Killer, Bayer Multi-Insect Killer Concentrate, Bayer Carpenter Ant & Termite Killer, Spectracide Flea & Tick Killer, Spectracide Triazicide Insect Killer Concentrate, Dragon Lawn & Garden Protector, Bonide Bug Beater Yard & Garden Concentrate, and Carbaryl Sevin Liquid Insecticide. Follow the label direction for mixing and applying the diluted spray. 3) Use insect repellents or clothing treatments with permethrin when in areas where ticks are known to be active.

Ticks usually wander on people for some time before attaching. Regular inspections will help to catch them before this occurs. Also, it appears that disease infected ticks must feed for 24 to 48 hours before disease transmission occurs. More information on the lone star tick in Kentucky is available from the Extension Office (723-4557) or online at <http://www.ca.uky.edu/entomology/entfacts/ef648.asp>.
